City alcohol ordinances may be in jeopardy

by Lindy Magner

The recent move by cities statewide to adopt ordinances regulating liquor outlets has resulted in efforts by alcohol retailer organizations to solicit the state Legislature's support in prohibiting such ordinances.

Several weeks ago, the Lemon Grove City Council unanimously approved an ordinance which requires conditional use permits for new alcohol outlets and sets distance limits for those businesses to discourage concentrations of alcohol vendors.

Last week, the state Assembly's Governmental Organization Committee held an informational hearing to determine if cities were pre-empted by state law from adopting ordinances regulating alcohol sales.

According to state Assemblyman Tom Connolly (77th District), one of the 15 legislators appointed to that committee, he and his colleagues believe cities have the right to create their own legislation.

"There was a general consensus that these are appropriate tools for communities in controlling what's become a serious problem," he said.

He stated that representatives of retailers' groups believed that current state laws pre-empt local governments from creating their own legislation regulating alcoholic beverage sales.

Article XX, Section 22 of the California Constitution reads that the state "shall have the exclusive right and power to license and regulate the manufacture, sale, purchase, possession and transportation of alcoholic beverages within the state."

However, according to a staff analysis prepared for the Governmental Organization Committee, the law allows cities and counties to control the issuance of liquor licenses through their land-use authority, "if the license is granted subsequent to the adoption of an ordinance or if the character or size of the licensed establishment is altered."

And, the Business and Professions Code reads, "... local governments can apply conditions regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages only on those establishments applying for new permits or on those seeking changes in use. Establishments which were in business before the institution of a CUP are 'grandfathered.'"

Connolly explained that much of the concern expressed at the hearing by retailers was directed at Oakland's recently adopted ordinance which includes existing businesses in its applications.

That ordinance allows the city to revoke a vendor's license because of criminal activity in the surrounding neighborhood, according to Don Beaver, president of the California Grocers Association and chairperson of the California beverage Retailer Coalition, a group recently formed to fight such ordinances.

"These ordinances will make it impossible for small (alcohol-related) businesses to survive. Retailers are not able to control or prevent crime in the neighborhood in which they do business," he said, adding that the coalition may challenge the Oakland ordinance in court.

David Jones of the League of California Cities recently sent letters to all city managers, asking them to join an effort to defend their rights to adopt alcohol-regulating ordinances. He has received responses from 90 cities to date.

"The alcohol retailers are dead-set on pre-empting cities from creating such ordinances. We're going to be vigilant in seeing that they don't get legislation which would replace the ability of cities to require CUPs."

It was a Red Ribbon week!

Monday morning, Monterey Heights Elementary School kicked off Red Ribbon Week with speeches and a ribbon-cutting by Mayor Brian Cochran (above right), a former student there, and state Assemblyman Tom Connolly. Canton Drive was blocked off so students could gather in the street. Superintendent Joe Farley and Connie Fish, assistant superintendent, were also at the PTA-sponsored event.

Woodards of Lemon Grove named county's Foster Parents of the Year

Steve and Jeanne Woodard know what it's like to watch newborn infants shake and cry their way into the world as they suffer through withdrawal from drugs.

That dedication recently was recognized by the County Department of Social Services which selected the couple for the Foster Parents of the Year award.

About five years ago, the Lemon Grove couple began caring for children taken out of their homes by the Department of Social Services.

The couple soon became certified to care for drug-addicted newborns, and began taking one to three infants for about six weeks, some as young as 18 hours old.

"Withdrawal for them is the same as it is for adults. Sometimes they scream for five hours at a time; we just snuggle them real tight and rock them," said Jeanne. She and her husband adopted one of those drug-addicted babies who now at age 5, still suffers seizures related to the early addiction.

For the last 1 1/2 years they've devoted their attention to only one infant, a child who at 3 months old was the victim of a head trauma. About two weeks ago, that baby lost its fight for life. However, the Woodards will not shy away from caring for kids, and plan to start receiving infants and children again.

"We truly enjoy kids and try to make them feel more secure and more loved," she said. "We also try to work with the parents and help them get their lives together."

Before adopting two children and assuming guardianship for another, the Woodards raised four children of their own.

The couple was selected for the award from the more than 1,500 foster parents in the county.

At the Oct. 22 event, the Woodards accept award.

Mt. Miguel El Trovador News Briefs

The Homecoming Football Game is scheduled against Granite Hills on Nov. 5 with kickoff at 7:30 p.m. The floats, which will be on the theme of Disneyland, will precede the game, starting at 7 p.m. Fireworks will be at half-time with the announcement of the Homecoming Queen whose name will be lit up with fireworks.

The Homecoming Dance will be the following evening at the Forte Hotel on Harbor Island starting at 8:30 p.m. at which the Homecoming King will be announced.

The five candidates for homecoming Queen are D'Ann Dobbins, Meesha Early, Kristi Gal, Julee Guerrero, and Niecy Nobles. The five candidates for King are Michael Cruz, Kirk Jarvis, Jamal McKenzie, Erwin Ramos, and Kirstine Wolfe.

Investment group forms

The Goal Getters Investment Club selected officers during its October meeting to serve an interim term until official elections take place in January.

The officers are: President, Karen O'Rourke; Vice President, Dick Fleet; Secretary, Eva Pinkham; and Treasurer, Rudy Garcia. The new club's founder, Eva Pinkham, said that the club currently has 11 members, and will be limited to 20. "The window of opportunity to join will close when we reach 20 members; at that point, interested candidates will be considered only when a vacancy occurs," she said.

Beyond the $30 entry fee, each of the club members are expected to deposit $25 per month for the purchase of securities.

"The purpose of this club is to educate members in wise investing. We'll learn how to research company stocks which have a history of good performance, and should continue to prosper," Pinkham said, adding that Bill Kelly, a stockbroker with Smith, Barney, Shearson, Inc., provides his knowledge to the group as an advisor. Monthly meetings are at the House of Canton, at 6 p.m. For more information, call Pinkham at 465-9925.

United Methodist Church to host Halloween carnival

The annual Halloween Carnival at Lemon Grove United Methodist Church will be held on Halloween night from 5 - 8 p.m.

Children will be able to play games, win prizes and go trick-or-treating.

There will be a cakewalk and a snack bar. Everyone is encouraged to come in costume. There is no admission charge. Booth tickets and refreshments will be reasonably priced. The church is located at 3205 Washington.

Historical Society to meet

The Lemon Grove Historical Society will hold its next meeting Nov. 4, 1:30 p.m., in the library's community room.

Speaking to the group on veterans' aid and benefits will be Ron Zeunges. The public is welcome to attend.

The library is located at 8073 Broadway, Lemon Grove.

Graffiti Cleanup Day to spruce up the town Nov. 6

Residents and business owners will don paint caps and tote paint rollers for Lemon Grove's second Graffiti Clean-Up Day Saturday, Nov. 6, from 9 a.m. - noon.

The first event, which was held last spring, brought more than 300 community-spirited volunteers.

Promoted by the Community Advisory Committee's (CAC) continuing effort to improve the City of Lemon Grove, the event will again begin with participants checking in at City Hall (Main and Church streets), receiving location instructions, and being issued paint and supplies.

Paint caps advertising the event will be offered while supplies last, and all citizens who help will be given certificates of appreciation. Demonstrations of graffiti-removal solvents are anticipated by Home Depot, which, as in the past, is providing paint supplies. Refreshments will also be served.

For more information, please leave a message on the graffiti hotline - 685-2093 and a CAC member will return your call.

B-Words Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Jacob's caucus

Recently, we in Lemon Grove were honored by the presence of the county supervisor for the second district, Dianne Jacob.

She showed up at the Grove Pastry Shop for the morning caucus and performed well. She did not exactly sit in the "hot seat" that I occupy each morning, but she did the next best thing. Circulating about the room, Dianne did a yeoman's job of answering questions, and advising our residents about county government. Her flyer asked, "need a pothole fixed?" and "are the bureaucrats giving you the runaround?"

I pointed out a few potholes that we would like to have filled, if the county was in the mind to do so for our Public Works Department. It would be a big help with the present financial crunch, and the backlog that our people have in street repair.

Also attending the affair was Tom Connolly, our Assemblyman, who lives in Lemon Grove and represents the 77th district. I had to chide him in that he seemed to be monopolizing Dianne's time, but he assured me that it was on behalf of Lemon Grove concerns, and not politicking. Tom has an intense and impatient exigency of demeanor and it must be that he is working hard for us.

It is encouraging to witness how Dianne is really trying to resolve the Sheriff/Board of Supervisors conflict. The need for more deputies on the streets is certainly obvious, but how much good can they do if there are not jails to confine miscreants? The denial of overtime, that was proving very lucrative to some of the deputies, has resolved much of the shortfall in Sheriff's department funds.

It is obvious that all branches of government in Southern California are in financial trouble. In Lemon Grove, we do have a comfortable reserve and are able to cope with some "rainy days."

I pointed out to Supervisor Jacob that we took great offense at being the target of both the state and the county simply because we were solvent. The frugal attitude that has been constant since our incorporation in 1977 has brought us to the present status. It is an overweening posture for the state to solve their financial problems by pirating our coffers. The invasion of our reserves was not lethal this year, but one wonders what will happen next year. If they get away with this embezzlement this year, what will they try next year?

It would seem to me that an across-the-board belt tightening is indicated. If some entitlements have to be cut, so be it. If state payrolls have to be drastically cut, why not? We have experienced a "holdup" that has no recourse, and apparently is not even illegal. The money that is paid by Lemon Grove citizens for car license fees, for property tax, for cigarette and liquor taxes, and sales taxes, is Lemon Grove's.

We have constricted the midriff in our town, and we believe that everyone else should do the same.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

This weekend, the children of California, as well as those of the rest of the country, will repeat the annual Halloween ritual of "trick or treat" as they go from door to door seeking free candy.

But on Tuesday, the voters of California will have their own more serious trick or treat to deal with. They will be voting on a constitutional law entitled Proposition 174. Those children who handle trick or treat incorrectly may have to deal with a temporary upset stomach, but for adults and children alike, the passage of Prop. 174 will constitute a fiscal and educational headache that won't go away.

The arguments, pro and con, have raged across the state for months now and this column has taken its "No on 174" stand in a previous issue. But with the election upon us, that argument bears underscoring.

Most people will agree that California's education system needs some degree of overhauling, although this differs in degree from district to district. Few will also disagree with the notion that a GOOD private school has its advantages of small classes, selected students and, usually, highly interested parents.

But Prop. 174, far from aiding in the improvement of the public system, promises to create a two-tier system of education in California in which the best, the brightest and the wealthiest will be accepted in the effective private schools, while those needing the most help and, I suspect, the minorities will continue in the financially depleted public schools, receiving even less education than before.

The state's non-partisan legislative analyst has stated that the dollar cost to the state of Prop. 174 would be staggering. Those who say that the "competition" engendered by 174 would be "good for the public system" find it difficult to explain how a system, depleted of both its brightest children AND millions of dollars can find itself in an improved competitive situation.

As to the private schools themselves, 174 allows that any individual or group gathering 25 children together will be considered a school and will forthwith receive $2,600 for each child. It speaks nothing, however, of standards or curriculum or teacher training or environment, thus opening the door to a variety of scams or cult-type religious "schools" which would seek to take advantage of the state's largess.

Those who back 174 also seem to be suggesting that, once passed, the law will open the doors of the solid private schools to any child whose parents apply for admission. Past experience suggests that, instead, those schools will select only a special few, leaving frustrated parents to seek among either lesser schools or the untested new ones which will surely proliferate.

Finally, should 174 pass, it will become the law and it would take a two-thirds majority to vote it out. In the 30-plus years that I have resided in the Golden State, I find it difficult to remember even a single instance in which two-thirds of this state's voters supported anything.

Once voted in, we would be stuck with the results of 174 for a long time to come, and stuck with the financial and educational chaos that would come in its wake. As the anti-174 ads so well say, "It's just not worth the risk." This appears to be a case of the trick far outweighing the treat.

From Where I Sit

What a movement

by Frank Andrews

In my youth the Halloween "tricks or treats" were partaken of by teenagers and not by little tots as today. I grew up in the rural area of Lake Minnetonka, a suburb of Minneapolis, where the houses were scarce and far between. When my gang knocked on a farmer's door on Halloween, we meant business.

We would demand "tricks or treats, money or eats!" The money and eats would be used for a big Halloween party after the "tricks." The parties were mild compared to nowadays. The strongest thing we had was 3.2 beer. Although drugs were never heard of in those times, we did make do with what we had.

If the farmer didn't cough up "treats" to our liking, we would pull one of our monumental capers on him. That usually meant stealing one of his buggies or wagons and placing it in some near impossible spot for all the town to view in bewilderment the next day.

Another stinky trick was to tip over the victim's outhouse. One Halloween we were going right by my house on the route to the next prank. One of the gang suggested, "Hey Frank, let's dump your dumper over just for practice."

We tipped it over and were gone before you could say "Oh poop." Dad was known to use his shotgun with a salt-and-pepper load on intruders.

The next day my Dad asked, "Hey Frankie Boy, were you with the boys last night that dumped over our outside plumbing facility?"

I answered after remembering my history lesson, "Dad I cannot tell a lie I was in on the deal." With that, I got one of the hardest licks of my life from my dad's "fast draw" belt.

I blubbered out between sobs, "Dad, little George Washington didn't get a beating like that from his daddy for telling the truth about cutting down the cherry tree."

Dad's answer to my babbling statement was, "Yes, I know son, but George's daddy wasn't sitting up in the cherry tree, either."

Giving Californians what they want in public schools

Whether the school voucher initiative wins or loses in November, policymakers and the public will have to make a number of crucial decisions affecting the state's public schools and its more than 5.3 million school children.

If voters approve Proposition 174 in November, policymakers will have to decide what to do about the numerous policy trade-offs that will emerge as a result of the initiative. Should the Proposition fail, Californians will continue to clamor for change and urge education leaders and policymakers to introduce new methods of funding, governing and delivering public education.

A new poll on public attitudes toward education reveals that Californians rate education just below the economy and crime as the most important problem facing the state. Californians want a dramatic change in education, provided it does not take funding away from public schools, the poll says.

The poll, conducted by Policy Analysis for California Education, the non-partisan think tank based at the University of California-Berkeley and Stanford University, indicates that Californians know what they want from their schools. Citizens want a safe learning environment for their children, high-quality teaching and curricula, smaller class sizes and more instruction focused on "values." By a 2 to 1 margin, the public favors the concept of a school voucher plan, and 8 in 10 want any school choice program to include private, as well as public, schools. At the same time, however, the public is leery of the costs of introducing a voucher initiative and wants assurances that state funds going to voucher schools come with academic and fiscal safeguards.

The PACE poll indicates that Californians essentially want change and would favor a regulated voucher system. The public believes that any private school receiving state funds should meet academic and fiscal requirements, hire certified teachers and publish test scores.

Californians are particularly concerned about the effect of vouchers on the state budget and overall funding for public schools. Nearly two-thirds of Californians believe the initiative will raise the cost of education. More than half say vouchers will not save the state money. Citizens do not want to see public school funding reduced if a voucher system is adopted. Fifty-six percent say they would oppose a voucher system if public school funding is reduced. Even those who are somewhat favorable to a school voucher system would oppose it if public school funding is cut.

While it is unclear how many students might transfer from public to private schools and how many private school spaces will be available, the poll gives an indication of parents' leanings toward moving children from one school to another. Nearly two-thirds of parents across all racial and ethnic groups say they would choose to send their child to the same school if a voucher system is adopted. However, one in four of those parents who would keep their child where they currently go to school would change schools if a voucher plan covered the full cost of tuition. Another 16 percent would send their child to a different school if the state picked up the tab for transportation.

Will the voucher initiative give Californians what they want? There are numerous trade-offs and uncertainties. The voucher initiative could lead to added costs to taxpayers or new savings, depending on a variety of choices by state policymakers and parents. In fact, because so many issues related to funding are unspecified in the voucher initiative, the overall financial effects will depend as much on actions in Sacramento as on the number of students who choose to use vouchers to attend would-be scholarship schools.

The authors, James W. Guthrie, Michael W. Kirst and Gerald C. Hayward, are directors of Policy Analysis for California Education (PACE) and Julia E. Koppich is deputy director of PACE, an independent, non-partisan think tank based at the University of California-Berkeley and at Stanford University.

Prop. 174 impacts community colleges

by Dr. Jeanne Atherton, Chancellor, Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District

This is not the time to make it harder to attend a community college. Yet that is exactly what is likely to happen if Proposition 174, the "Voucher Initiative," passes on Nov. 2.

Most of the discussion around the initiative has focused on K-12 education. Yet there is another, less-noticed group that will be affected: community colleges and their students.

Community college students receive no benefits from Proposition 174, but would be penalized by its passage. Community college students are not eligible for vouchers/"scholarships," nor are the colleges eligible to become "scholarship-redeeming schools."

Proposition 98, passed by California voters in 1988, created a "pool" of funds for education and tied community college funding to the amount of money provided K-12. Voucher payments come straight out of this Proposition 98 pool, depleting the dollars available for both K-12 and community college public education.

Funds available to community colleges could be reduced by an amount estimated to range from 10 to 16 percent. For the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District, this would mean a loss of between $4.6 and $7.3 million.

Community colleges provide students with a point of entry into higher education. Adults already in the workplace enroll to train or retrain for today's occupations. Community college education is the most cost-effective education in the country.

Obviously, the best educational and economic interest of the community colleges and the state would not be served if there is a loss of funding due to approval of the voucher initiative by the voters. Weakening the community college system by passing Proposition 174 doesn't make sense.

Fed up with politicians!

Dear Editor:

I'm fed up being conned by politicians masquerading as elected representatives. I'm casting a "no confidence" vote in state and county government. I'm voting against the sales tax extension for "public safety."

I'm tired of the county Board of Supervisors and the state Legislature shirking their responsibility to govern. These so-called leaders are irresponsible and arrogant.

State legislators passed the buck to local governments on Proposition 172, forcing counties to place this sales tax extension on the ballot. They didn't want to shoulder any responsibility for a tax that might hinder their chances of re-election.

We need to stop re-electing people who keep asking the voters to make their decisions for them. If our legislators felt there was a need to extend the sales tax to pay for needed services, they should have just extended it. Why the expense of a statewide election and special conditions limiting use of the funds to "public safety"? Police and fire should already have priority for public spending at all levels of government.

I have supported tax proposals in the past that were billed as "good" for everyone. I voted for tax measures that are building a freeway and trolley extension to Santee and freeway improvements to relieve traffic in affluent North County communities.

I supported a public safety tax for more jails and courts that was found unconstitutional. Hundreds of millions were collected and are still tied up in litigation.

I am no longer giving our current crop of incumbent politicians the benefit of the doubt. I don't believe dire predictions of catastrophe being spouted by top level bureaucrats, judges and county supervisors. They seem to have plenty of staff left to prepare self-promoting news releases and enough money in the coffers to keep sending political junk mail at taxpayers' expense.

I don't doubt that hard-working public servants delivering over the counter service to citizens will get laid off if this measure fails. Unfortunately, those in government doing the wasteful spending are the ones deciding where to cut. On the other hand, maybe if they really do have to cut to the bone, the fat, administrative overhead and perks of our "leaders" and executives will no longer be able to hidden behind popular people services like police, parks and libraries.

We've been told the county government will have to fold its tent if Prop. 172 doesn't pass. Frankly, it isn't worth saving.

Chris Heiserman, Spring Valley

Lamplighters to present murder mystery

Jill Drexler and Adam Goodie in "Murder by Natural Causes" opening Nov. 5 at Lamplighters Theatre.

The Lamplighters Community Theatre presentation of "Murder By Natural Causes" opens Friday, Nov. 5. A stylish and witty suspense play that combines laughter with thrills, it delivers what mystery fans love most - taut suspense and ingenious plot.

Arthur Sinclair is a successful clairvoyant. His wife, Allison, plots his murder. Her foolproof plan cannot possibly misfire as it's too skillfully inventive - or is it? After all, Arthur has psychic gifts!

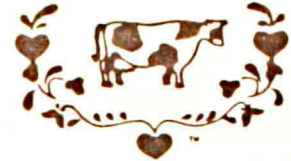

Directed by Anisa Shamis Cox and produced by Gladys Roncey, the cast includes Kelsie Parker, Jill Drexler, Lynda Harris, Rosalie Asaro, Adam Goodie, Frank O'Leary, Paul Roger and Lucille Besch.

The Lamplighters will present, "Murder By Natural Causes" at 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, Nov. 5 through Dec. 4, with one Thursday evening performance on Nov. 18. Sunday matinees will be presented at 2 p.m. on Nov. 7, 14, 21, 28 and Dec. 5.

Tickets are $8 for adults - $7 for seniors, students and active military. For information, call 464-4598.

Local firm to host estate planning seminar for tax pros

Andy Knutson, the Edward D. Jones & Co. investment representative in La Mesa, will host a continuing professional education broadcast for area CPAs and tax professionals Wednesday, Nov. 10. Titled "Estate Planning for Closely Held Businesses and Highly Compensated Individuals," the program is a service of the Edward D. Jones & Co. Professional Education Network and is eligible for two hours of continuing professional education credit for CPAs. The program is pending approval for continuing legal education for attorneys.

"As the baby boomers grow older, many are beginning to make plans for their families' financial future," Knutson said. "This program should help tax professionals better meet the estate-planning needs of this segment and others."

The interactive broadcast will cover the $10,000 annual exclusion, trusts, unified credit, marital deductions, Revenue Ruling 93-12 and more, featuring a panel of nationally recognized tax authorities. For more information, or to register for this broadcast, call Knutson at 698-6688.

Helix Happenings

by Sara Bone, Highland Fling Co-Editor-In-Chief

This week is Helix's homecoming and the theme for this year is Storybook Land. The events started off with dress up days. Monday was Cat in the Hat Day, so students were encouraged to wear hats. Also a homecoming assembly was held to promote school spirit for homecoming events. The characters for Tuesday's dress-up day were Tweedledee and Tweedledum. From Alice in Wonderland, students dressed like twins. Wednesday was Emerald City Day, and everyone wore green. Sleeping Beauty was the story for Thursday's events which included coming to school in your pajamas. Friday, Oct. 29, students will be coming to school in their Halloween costumes, and a costume parade and contest will be held at lunch. The homecoming game will start at 7:30 and the Highlanders will be looking for another win as they challenge the undefeated Granite Hills Eagles. The JV game will be held at Granite Hills at 4:30.

Some other events coming up on the 29th are Waterpolo vs. Grossmont at Grossmont at 4 p.m. and cross country has a bye.

Here's next week's events:

Tuesday - Waterpolo vs. Valhalla at Helix at 4 p.m., Girl's Volleyball vs. Grossmont at Grossmont at 5 p.m. and JV at 4 p.m.

Thursday - Waterpolo vs. Granite Hills at Helix 4 p.m., Girl's Volleyball vs. Valhalla at Helix 5 p.m. JV at 4 p.m.

Friday - Cross country vs. Grossmont at Lindo Lake 3:30 p.m., Football vs. Grossmont at Helix 7:30 p.m., JV Football vs. Grossmont at Helix at 4 p.m.

I hope that you all come to some of the Helix events and support the Highlanders.

Taylor makes it to the big show

by Joe Gawlowicz

The aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk and its crew played host to a cast of country and western recording artists when TNN, the Nashville Network, traveled to San Diego to tape an all-star country concert aboard the ship Sept. 20.

Airman Recruit Carl B. Taylor, the 25-year-old son of Evelyn Taylor of Lemon Grove, was one of the lucky crew members to be invited to be part of the audience for the invitation-only production.

More than 300 sailors and their guests filled the carrier's flight deck to watch the performances of Clint Black, Aaron Tippin, Restless Heart, Shenandoah, Martina McBride, Larry Stewart and Lari White.

The performers were framed by the Navy's F-14 Tomcat and F/A-18 Hornet aircraft as the San Diego skyline shone from across the bay.

The production will be a one-hour special, Southern California Spectacular, telecast on TNN Nov. 3 at 8 p.m. Eastern Time.

San Altos Fall Festival and Carnival

With something for almost everyone to enjoy, the San Altos Fall Festival was a big success. There was face painting, hair spiking, games, contests and a costume parade.

Showcase Writers Club honors talent

by Zerlina De Santis

It was a gala awards night on Sunday evening, Oct. 24 at La Mesa's Ben Polak Auditorium. Seats were filled with enthusiastic writing devotees awaiting the announcement of the grand award winners of the 27th annual writing contest sponsored by the Showcase Writers' Club.

There was a hush of anticipation when Showcase President Mary Giacinto set the event in motion. Trophies were lined up in full view as the competitors, their colleagues and friends, awaited the decisions of the judges.

In the adult story category, judges Pearl Silvernale, author of two poetry collections and Patricia Curtis, Mt. Miguel High School's journalism teacher, selected as their top three, Dave Gregg, first place award; F. Mickey Mikalauskas, second place and Arn Shein, third place.

Articles were judged by Nancy Weingartner, managing editor of the Daily Californian and Eric M. Odendahl, veteran professor of journalism at SDSU. Their choices were Eve Lilith, first place, Evelyn Kellman, Ph.D., second place and Dave Gregg, third.

For serious poetry, judges Kathleen Dutenhoeffer, La Mesa-Spring Valley School District educator/administrator and Toni Swanson, poetry therapist, favored Jeanne Meech Park as first-place winner; Lillian Kellman, Ph.D., second place, and Arn Shein, third place.

Humorous poetry judges Jean Meagher, retired La Mesa-Spring Valley School District teacher and Anne Wal, secretary of the Torrey Pines Chapter of the California Federation of Chaparral poets, chose for first-place winner, Millie Walker; Douglas K. Domingo, second place and Frank J. Williams, third.

Children's short stories judged by Diana Logue of Lemon Grove, a published children's author, and Rita Micklish, author/teacher with SDSU, elected Penny Wilkes for first place; Lillian M. Fisher for second and Fiona A. Young, third.

The program culminated in an inspiring applause for judges and participants alike.

This local competition, accessible to all San Diego County writers, opens every year March 1 and ends on June 30, with the awards ceremony in October.

The old adage, "If you wish to be a writer, write!" comes alive the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the Community Center on Memorial Drive in La Mesa, where the Showcase Writers' Club meets. For 42 years, club members have convened to critique each other's writings.

To learn more about the Showcase Writers' Club or about next year's writing contest, drop a note to any of the officers. Mary Giacinto, president; Ruby Becker, vice president; Helen Baker, secretary; Ed Myers, treasurer. Address correspondence to P.O. Box 691, Lemon Grove, CA 91945.

LG Middle School student has role in CYT musical

Jeremiah Smith, a Lemon Grove Middle School student, will appear on stage when Christian Youth Theater (CYT) presents a musical version of "Pollyanna" beginning Oct. 28.

Pollyanna changes the attitude of an entire town by looking for something good in everything in this heartwarming story that will delight audiences of all ages.

Smith plays the part of Rev. Ford, the "fire and brimstone preacher" in Pollyanna's town. This is his first CYT production, but he has been on stage in two shows at First Baptist in Lemon Grove as well as summer school shows. Smith is also active in AWANA, Boy Scouts and Pony League.

Pollyanna will be played by Chelsea Baker, a student of La Mesa Middle School. Her older sister, Courtney, is also in the cast, playing the role of Nancy. Danica Jones, Valhalla High School freshman, plays Miss Polly. Marianne Nevitt, a student at Grossmont High School, is assisting professional choreographer Allison England.

All aspects of the production, lighting, sound, backstage crew and performing, is done by students ages 8-18 who are enrolled in CYT theater arts classes held in La Mesa.

Performance dates for "Pollyanna" are Oct. 28, 29, Nov. 5 and 6 at 7 p.m. Matinees are Oct. 30, 31, Nov. 6 and 7 at 2 p.m. at the Lewis Junior High School auditorium, 5170 Greenbrier Ave., in San Diego. Ticket prices are $5-$7 with special discounts to groups of 15 or more.

For ticket reservations and more information concerning CYT call 588-0206.

High school district news

by Susan Wolfe-Fleming

Ric White, district well-being specialist, explained the many reasons for concern regarding student drug use. Surveys conducted in 1992 reflected that 62 percent of high school students had consumed beer within the last six months, 10 percent had used marijuana and 10.6 percent had tried LSD.

The program for Red Ribbon Week would include issuing 10,000 ribbons, conducting an essay contest and offering incentives.

School staff would be given names of programs offering help to drug and alcohol users (including steroid information). There would also be in-service programs offered.

An emphasis on positive lifestyles would be a major role in the program. A play, "The Attic," would be available along with pledge cards. Members of Cajon Speedway's Racers Against Drugs would make a presentation. This group was presented an award recently at Parkway Plaza for being a good role model, demonstrating the philosophy of living their dream and promoting the importance for kids to stay in school.

Many classified staff were recognized during the regular board meeting. Kathleen Buczynski received an award for heroic measures taken during a work experience field trip. She found an employee on the grounds of the Rancho San Diego Golf Course who had come into contact with high voltage power lines. Buczynski administered CPR and saved his life.

Jeanice Hartschen from Valhalla High School and Penny Deuth from El Cajon Valley High School were awarded the Quarterly Outstanding Classified Employee Award.

Excerpts from a book, "511 Reminders For a Happy Life," written by Jackson Browne were read; learn CPR, commit yourself to constant improvement, and be brave - even when you're not, pretend to be, no one will know the difference.

Class sizes were reported to be at 34.8 students and operating within fiscal restraints. Teachers see an average of 174 students per day, which is down by one student per day from last year.

There will be one person appointed by each board member to a committee to evaluate possible school boundary changes. The board was to inform the superintendent's office of the appointees by the last week of October.

Direction was given to the staff by the board to review and report on non-discrimination and multicultural policies. The process by which staff is given direction was an issue as board member Tom Davies pointed out. Since procedure requires no vote to be taken on issues sent to staff, Superintendent Dr. JoAnn Smith acknowledged a majority of nods to the effect that these issues should be reviewed.

Fire marshal offers Halloween safety tips

The California State Fire Marshal recommends that everyone (especially parents) should be aware of some of the hazards associated with wearing Halloween costumes and take the following precautions:

- Costumes should be light-colored - use fluorescent or reflective tape strips (available at hardware, bicycle and sporting goods stores).
- Purchase costumes made of FLAME RETARDANT material. (Check the label!)
- Avoid flimsy materials such as light-weight cotton fabrics which are easily ignited.
- Keep hemlines short enough to prevent tripping and avoid loose, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts.
- A natural mask of cosmetics applied directly to the skin is recommended.
- Use battery powered lights - NEVER CANDLES - to light jack-o-lanterns.
- Instruct children to stay away from open flames.
- Remove objects from the yard that present a hazard to children (garden tools, hoses on portable sprinklers, etc.)
- Be extremely careful with tinder-dry cornstalks and other harvest-season items. Keep them away from sources of heat. Don't let them block doorways or stairs.
- If you are driving on Halloween, take care ... watch out for trick-or-treaters who will be too busy to watch out for you.
- Be certain that small children are under supervision at all times!
